People in Scotland believe that we all should have enough to live a decent life, free from the injustice of poverty, debt, and destitution. But more and more of us feel that we are on shaky ground. Some of our incomes never seem enough to cover what we need for the essentials of a decent life. Many of us struggle to pay our bills, heat our homes, or even buy enough to eat.

The policy solution that has emerged in response to these issues is the Minimum Income Guarantee, a transformational idea centred on setting a minimum income level below which nobody in Scotland would not be allowed to fall.

The Minimum Income Guarantee can provide the solid foundation that we all need, no matter what life throws at us. Through a combination of fair paid work, high quality services, and better social security, all of us will have the right to a minimum standard of living. It's an investment in a better future where we all have the freedom to build a more secure life for ourselves and our households, and a better society for everyone.

We all have a role to play in pushing for the implementation of a Minimum Income Guarantee. We need to come together to get the policy on the agenda, and then advocate for implementation in the next Parliament. Join us.
